"I hope this attack is not repeated, especially now that we are attemptiog to huild good relations with Iran."

Shipping executives, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Iranians approached only to within several hundred yards (metres) of the shore and escaped unscathed after an encounter that lasted only a few minutes.

Kuwait supports Iraq in the 7-1/2-year-old Gulf war and in the final mnoths of last year its oil installations came under attack by six Iranian Silkworm missiles.

Buhiyan, inhabited only by troops, serves as a forward defence positioo for Kuwait and is linked to the mainland by a bridge.

The marshy island of about 300 sq miles (775 sq km), the largest of nine Kuwaiti islands in the Gulf, is separated by a narrow waterway from Iraq's Faw peninsula which was occupied by Iranian forces in 1986.

Egypt also deplaced the incident.

Sioce the authority is independent and no longer uoder a ministry it can achieve a lot. Water will not be a problem due to the advances in technology and the progress made in hrioging the Shatt Al Arab water to Kuwait

Food security will now depend on the strength of the decisions taken on the matter. Whether there will be food security in Kuwait or whether we will remain importers of many kinds of foodstuff, includiog mioeral water, remaios to be seen.

The important role io this matter is that of the agricultural authority.

We are looking to Sheikh Ihrahim to stroogly implement the role of the authority, especially as he is very fond of agriculture.

Afghan accord is still possible: America

GENEVA, March 30, (Reuter): US envoy Robert Peck said today he was convinced that an Afghan agreement was still possible, despite Soviet insistence on continuing its military aid to Afghanistan.

I remain convinced that the Soviets want an agreement," Peck, a deputy assistant secretary of state, told reporters at the start of the fifth week of the latest round of UN talks aimed at a Soviet troop withdrawal from Afghanistan.

But he admitted that the super-powers remain divided by an "apparently intractible pro-blem" — Soviet determination to continue military supplies to Kahul. Washington wants them to stop in tandem with any end in US aid to the Afghan rebels.

Without concessions from one or both superpowers on that issue, the UN accord appeared doomed, diplomats said. Soviet Ambassador-at-large

Nikolai Kozyrev said it would be impossible for the Kremlin to end supplies to the rebels, and said it was not even being discus-

Meeting

"The cutting off of aid is not a topic of discussion. It's impossihle," he told reporters before meeting mediator Diego Cor-dovez, UN Undersecretary-General.

Peck said he was ready to stay as long as it took to find a solution acceptable to all sides.

The art of diplomacy is to try to find solutions to apparently intracuble problems. We have an apparently intractible problem and we're trying to find a way to Officially the talks are between Afghanistan and Pakistan, host and ally of three million Afghan refugees and the Afghan mujabedeen guerrillas.

But increasingly the negotia-tions have developed into a superpower clash. Neither the Pakistanis nor the Afghans showed up this morning, and the Afghan chief delegate has not appeared at the talks for several days.

Guarantee

The UN pactdoes not guarantee peace but is designed to create conditions for stability by getting the withdrawal of an estimated 115,000 Soviet soldiers and an end to the military supplies - at least the aid to the rebels.

The United States was called on to guarantee the cut-off of supplies, which are relayed rakisian.

In Moscow yesterday, Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said US guarantees would not be needed if Pakistan would agree to stop the aid. But Pakistan has firmly backed the US demand for a symmetrical end to Soviet sup-

"It might be an attempt to split Pakistan off from the United States," Peck commented.

Concept

"My impression is that Pakistan and the United States see eye to eye. The concept of symmetry, the reality of a halanced agreement are essential to the United States and Pakistan."

He also dismissed Afghan President Najihullah's proposals yesterday on power-sharing as much ado about nothing.

Najihullah offered to form a new coalition government giving the rebels several ministries if they ended their nine-year-old war. Gerasimov said the Afghan President offered them the posts of prime minister and vicepresident. The presidency in Afghanistan is all powerful and the rebels refuse to work with Naiihullah. There is no evidence that Najib (Najihullah) intends to voluntarily give up power. "Peck

PARIS, March 30, (Reuter): A bomh exploded near Pretoria's Embassy today in a wave of attacks on South African targets in France after the killing of the Paris representative of the African National Congress supporters, including prominent members of the French Communist Party and many immigrant workers, staged a torch-lit procession to the ANC office on the Rue des Petite Ecuries last night to protest against the killing. After the rally several dozen young communists rampaged down a central boulevard and stormed the South African tourist office. Several demonstrators and policemen were injured during the scuffles and police made about 30 arrests.

About 300 people including the Secretary-General of the French Social a parceful party.

In the heat of the French election campaign September's murder has become a bone of contention, with left-wing politicians demanding to know why such a prominent anti-apartheid campaigner was not under police protection. "We are worried by revela-

Democratic race is unpredictable

Dukakis wins Connecticut primary

NEW YORK, March 30. (Renter): The fight for the Democranic presidential nomination remained unpredictable today as Michael Dukakis reinvigorated his campaign with a needed victory in the Connecticut primary.

The Massachusetts governor trounced black civil rights leader Jesse Jackson hy a better than 2to-I margin in a contest he had to win hig to keep his White House The victory came just three days after Jackson established himself as a strong challenger for the nomination hy beating Dukakis hy a similar 2-to-1 margin in the Michigan caucuses.

Jackson told reporters in Washington: "Michael Dukakis certainly is the front-runner. He has the most money, the most endorsements...I am just running the race at my own pace." Dukakis took nearly 60 per cent of the vote and 36 convention delegates, with Jackson garnering about 29 per cent of the ballotting and the remaining 16 Tennessee Senator Alheri Gore, as yet without a victory in a northern state, trailed a distant third with about eight per cent. He won no delegates. Vice-President George Bush won yesterday's Republican presidential primary in Connecticul with 70 per cent of the vote. But the victory in the state where he grew up as the son of a prominent senator really did not matter. His main opponent, Kansas

Senator Robert Dole, dropped out of the race yesterday, conceding the nomination to Bush. The vice-president's spokesman. Pete Teeley, said it would now take a miracle to deny Bush the nomination. The last remaining rival to

Bush, former television evangelist Pat Robertson, once claimed to have turned back a hurricane through prayer. Even he con-cedes Bush will be the nominee.

In a news conference after his Connecticut victory, Dukakis said the race was now between himself and Jackson and "one of us will emerge from the primary process on June 7 with a substantial lead if not the majority of delegates. Al present, the two men are neck and neck with just over 600 delegates each and 2,082 needed to secure the nomination. The Democratic primary contests have so far had several different winners but have failed to produce a clear front-runner. Missouri congressman

Richard Gephardt won the season's first test, the Iowa caucuses, hut stumbled elsewhere and left the race on Monday. Illinois senator Pnul Simon won his home state primary but could be on the verge of withdrawing if he fares as poorl as expected in the next tests. Dukakis, meanwhile, is husily wooing the 698 "super delegates" to the party's July nominating convention — the party professionals and elected officials not pledged to a par-ucular candidate. These "super delegates" could hold the key to the nomination and many party professionals are concerned over a Jackson candidacy, arguing privately, but not in public, that a black cannot win the presidency.

Polls show that Dukakis could beat Bush in a general election, but that Jackson would fare badly.

In primary contests so far, Jackson has averaged 90 per cent or better of the hlack vote but usually less than 20 per cent of the white vote.

EATING in a first class restaurant should be like a visit to a good hairdresser — one's morale should be boosted by being pampered, spoilt and made to feel very special. Of course the waiter's role in all of this is crucial. A first-class waiter is a multi-talented person. He has the charm of a courtier, the discretion of a diplomat and the stamina of a sprinter. He needs an artist's hands to decorate your plate with an attractive collage of food and a linguist's tongue to interpret the menu into different languages. He has some-thing of a dancer's grace and a gourmet's knowledge. He is the conductor wbo orchestrates the meal with perfect timing. The impossible is expected of him, for be should be invisible but always there when the guest needs him. No wonder the best waiters are born not trained!

The standard of service at the Sberaton Hotel is generally high, so it was no surprise that their premier restaurant, the Riccardo, employs some of the best waiters in Kuwait. From tbeir warm weleome to pleasant farewells, the staff made our meal memorable.

With its costly marble pillars, raw-silk, rouched drapes and brass statuettes, the Riccardo has an air of discreet opulence. Heavy wooden dressers display a collection of antique pottery, while prints and oils bung on the brocade-covered walls are reflected in the brass-framed mirrors. The candlelit room has a mood of gentle elegance, echoed in the soothing strains of Italian and English ballads from the singer and guitarist. Even the air-conditioning is adjusted to just the right level.

It's worth lingering over the menu with its fascinating history of Italian euisine and the origins of various dishes. Three different soups and four hors d'ocuvres are offered. There is a choice of eight home-made pasta disbes at under KD3 each, a selection of Italian fish dishes including perch, mussels and sole and a wide variety of veal preparations from KD4 to KD5. Chicken, lamb and beef feature on the menu as well as international specialities like lobster and smoked salmon. Attractively arranged on a silver tray, the antipasto comprised a tempting selection of ten delicious cold hors d'oeuvres including slices of avocado marinated in garlic, artichoke hearts, marinated mussels, prawns, lohster, smoked octopus, mackerel, cod and beef, cheese and a julienne of vegetables. The warm hors d'oeuvres (Ghiottonerie Calde) was less to my taste hut is the perfect starter for those with a hearty appetite. It included chicken in breadcrumbs, fisb in batter, aubergine in batter, leeks wrapped in beef bacon, tasty mussels with a macedoine of green peppers and delicious minced liver with chopped onions and tomatoes.

For the main course we chose Lobster Thermidor - two large halves of fresh lobster dressed in a very cheesey sauce garnished with earthy-tasting field mushrooms. Moist and sweet, the lobster was served with noodles or rice and turnips, leeks, red cabbage and string beans.

For dessert one could either make a selection from the trolley which included homemade apple cake, cheese cake and fruit salad, or order meringues, ice-cream and other delicacies from the menu. 1 chose Terra Misa-a fairy-light, vanilla-flavoured cream made from cheese, served on a bed of cake soaked in syrup and topped with powdered chocolate. Heavenly! The home-made icecream was excellent. Four varieties - vanilla, strawberry, pistachio and chocolate, each with its own distinctive fresh

As a finale we ordered cups of cappuceino which was served with a selection of petits fours, exquisite marsh-mallow tartlets and biscuits. Each lady guest is presented with a red rose at the end of the meal and. just so the gentlemen don't feel neglected, everyone is given an

Government should start buying shares

KUWAIT'S economy is now built around 30 to 40 companies and hanks operating in various economic sectors.

The business activities of these companies are also coupled to an active trade in Kuwait, especially the transit trade. These companies are very active in the international arena through very profitable deals.

The question is, if the internal situation of these companies is not good then they may be forced to lose the facility of overseas activity.

At present, the real estate market is witnessing an encouraging movement, while, on the other hand, the prices of shares at the stock market are going down. This is not because the companies trading sbares in the market are in a bad position. The government has already guaranteed the rights of sbareholders, has guaranteed the bank deposits and has guaranteed almost everything.

So why is there a retreat in share prices? The question is one of confidence and technique in trading.

In the Kuwait Stock Market there is a limit to the rise in the prices of shares — this method is not accepted nor adopted anywhere in the world.

In the Kuwait Stock Market the share prices cannot increase beyond the limits set by the management.

Taking into consideration the fact that the government is the guarantor for the banks and some other companies, this means that any retreat in share prices is at the cost of the government. The government should therefore not allow the prices of shares to drop, especially when there is no reason or cause for it.

Moreover, the creation of trust at the market also becomes necessary for the government.

The government is causing a big stir at the London Stock Market by purchasing a lot of British Petroleum shares and causing the share prices to rise. It is also causing prices to rise in the Spanish market by huying

The government, however, is forgetting the Kuwait Stock Market.

Now, if the government intervenes in the market by buying the shares it sold before, it could huy the shares at a lower price. If the government adopts the policy of buying shares although in small amounts, from the stock market in Kuwait, it would certainly bring life back to trading.

Moreover, the government should ask the companies, banks and establishments to buy 10 per cent of their shares from the stock market in line with the decision to this effect taken months ago. Such a measure would strengthen confidence in the market.

The Kuwait economy is centred around 30 or 40 companies, and the savings and investments of Kuwaitis

If the government wants to get good results, then it should adopt this policy. By adopting this policy the government would help the companies to overcome their troubles instead of being forced to guarantee the companies.

The speculation of the government in the stock market will certainly strengthen it, but this strength carnot grow if the internal situations collapse as a result of the fact that the government pays more attention to overseas markets. A wise policy would be based on the fact that any strength abroad must be accompanied by strength at home. Otherwise, weakness at home will certainly start influencing the overseas activities.

Le Pen campaigns for 'French France'

By Elaine Ganley

AMIENS, France, (AP): Extreme right leader Jean-Marie le Pen, whipping up a crowd of 1,500 supporters, paints a picture of a decadent, declining and endangered France, a tower of babel overrun by immigrants. For a year now, the champion of a "French France," the first man to announce his candidacy in the April 24 presidential elec-tions, has been pounding out the

With less than a month to go, the message is being heard — by other candidates scrambling for Le Pen's voters — and his prediction that immigration will be a key issue of the election appears to be coming true.
"Today we are in great danger," Le Pen told his audience in this communist-controlled town in the northern Picardy region. France is suffering "a demographic loss, a moral loss, a religious loss ... and when you lose the instinct for life, you condemn yourself to death."

Like a fire and brimstone preacher, the ruddy, silver-haired Breton uses his considerable oratorial skills to shock, taunt, cajole his listeners. Then he bomes in on his favourite fears immigration, insecurity, drugs, AIDS—and extolls his favourite virtues — God, family and

"The renaissance of France must come through drastic measures," says Le Pen, 59, the son of a fisherman If elected president, Le Pen says, he will amend the constitution to allow for referendums on social issues, then hold a vote to send large portions of non-European immigrants home, reinstitute the death penalty for drug traffickers and terrorists and quarantine victims of Acquired Immune Deficiency

Critics charge that the aggressive Le Pen, a one-time paratrooper in Indochina and Algeria, is a fascist, a racist and an anti-Semite — which he denied — and that his National Front encourages xenophobia.

Some analysts say le Pen hurt bimself last September when be referred to the Nazi gas chambers as a "detail" in the history of World War II. Later that month, protesis forced Le Pen to cancel a visit to Britain to address a meeting during the governing Conservative Party conference.

Now running fourth in opin-ion polls, which give him about 10 percent of the vote, Le Pen has become an important electoral Socialist President Francois Mitterrand remains the favourite, consistently garnering about 38 per cent in the polls for the April 24 first round, which would pit him against the top conservative candidate in the Indian middle class pessimistic

By Christian Fuerst

NEW DELHI, (Dpa): India's middle class, especially the buge sub-continent's intellectuals, are filled with gloom, fearful that their modest riches, laboriously acquired in the past few years, will be whittled away by drastic government-ordered price rises.

Indians are not just frustrated by the accelerating rise in the cost of living. Recent opinion polls show that a rising number of peo-ple feel deeply disappointed hy the political leadership too.

The exuberant enthusiasm with which the vast majority greeted Rajiv Gandhi when he took over three years ago as the nation's new prime minister has long given way to a profound disillusionment

The Times of India newspaper summed up the prevailing feeling recently when it said Indians were "a nation on edge". Violence

prices, ployment, growing violence, the breakdown of public services, petty corruption and the venality of those armed with authority had led to "a hurgeoning sense of insecurity" which made people perfectly indifferent to any rhetoric of progress or modernity", the paper added. This negative outlook is clearly reflected in the country's English-language press still regarded as the mouthpiece of the elite. Leading journalists and readers alike bave been angered by political scandals that have tarnished the image of Rajiv's style of government. When Rajiv took over as leader be had nearly all of the press bebind him. Today the. number of pro-government publications has shrunk to only a

BOSTON: After a period of apathy and dismay following the Challenger disaster, the United States appears to be reentering — if only at a crawl the race to commercialise

Joseph Allen, for one, plans to be a part of that race. This ormer astronaut-turned-busiessman wants to be landlord of the first industrial park in space. In his mind's eye be can see it floating in frigid solitude 230 miles above the earth — a $500 million 35-foot-long, 14.5-foot-wide space station, or Industrial Space Facility

Not to be confused with the $14.6 billion publicly financed space station being built by the National Aeronautics and space Administration, Dr Allen's ISF is a much smaller, for-profit effort.

"We are like a general architects' firm that bas designed a fairly substantial office building," says Allen, market-ing director of Space Industries Inc., of Houston. "We bave taken the ISF this far on speculation, the conviction that it is important, and that there will be a market.

But the long-term success of ISF is strongly linked to the gradual deployment of Nasa's space station, which seems liky to be hit bard by the recent congressional budget cut compromise. Nasa has gone ahead bravely, recently awarding $5 billion in space station con-tracts to Rockwell International, McDonnell Douglas Astronautics. Boeing Aerospace, and General despite the threat. The space station was supposed to be built by 1992.

Budget realities and the Challenger disaster have brought back to earth Nasa's dreams of colonies on the moon and factories in space, but the good news is that big business in the US is taking an interest in space research

but probably won't be finished

A self-proclaimed optimist, Allen sees reasons to be hopeful even though the ISF is just a schematic drawing at this point. Allen says the ISF will be in orbit by 1992. But whether it ever flies depends most on US businesses, and whether they will commit to lease part of it. Success also depends on the reliability of the space sbuttle. Yet, a number of experts say

"cautious optimism" is growing.
"There has been a subtle shift in mood, from dead in the water to a greater anticipation," says John Egan, who beads the Egan Group, a consulting company in Washington, D.C which helps prepare business plans for companies trying to get research projects into space.

Reasons for the shift in mood include the following: - A fast-approaching date for launching the first, manned space shuttle launch since Challenger, scheduled for next

Nearly $5 billion in space station contracts have been awarded. Presidential and congressional political support for it remains strong, thought it is likely the recent $76 billion budget cut will slow

The appointment of James Rose, an experienced aerospace industry executive and approach to Nasa funding.

Slowly, people are realising the question we must resolve is whether the US is going to be No. 2, No. 3, or No. 4 in space," Glaser says. "The danger of slipping to fourth place would have some tremendous economic effects, not immediately but, in the long run."

Approach

Congress and the President support the space station programme, be says, yet "the problem is that in the space game all these other countries talk about 12-15-20-year programme plans and then commit funds to them. They have the advantage of experience and data. If you outsped your competition by a fac-tor of 3 to 5, obviously you will be abead technically.

A good example of the stutter-siep approach to space budgeting has come in the wake of the 508 point stock market drop Oct 19. The $76 billion, two-year budget cut means Nasa's share of the cuts could total 3.5 per cent of a lean $9.3 billion budget, says David Dickerson, an aide for the House Subcommittee on Science, Space, and Technology.

Such a cut could mean a space station project receiving just 50 per cent of the $767 million currently appropriated for the first year of the project. Dickerson says. Costs for the first phase of the programme are put at $13.6 billion, but some experts put total costs at more than $20 billion by the

"We know for sure the cuts (to Nasa) are going to be sub-stantial," Dickerson says, "It is likely that deployment of the station will be delayed" from the 1994 target date. Despite the cuts, aerospace companies like McDonnel Douglas and Boeing are glad to go after even these relatively small contracts since defense spending seems likely to be cut back in coming

Budget realities have also brought back to earth entrepreneurial dreams of colonies on the moon, factories in space, and multiple manned stations in orbit. Serious space entrepreneurs seem grateful.

"There was a lot of bype that was building up three or four years ago," says Charles Bugg, director of the centre of a macromolecular crystallography at the University of Alabama, Birmingham, "It's been a chance to sit back and take a hard-nosed look at reality, and gain a more real perception of how space can be

Also indicating a warming of business toward space research is Lawrence Herbolsheimer, deputy to Rose in Nasa's Office of Commercial Programmes. "After the shuttle accident, people's spirits couldn't bave been lower," Herbolsheimer says. Now there is "feverish activity," he says, and an upbeat mood. Two recent conferences in Nashville and in Houston were attended by hundreds of companies.

Herbolsbeimer points to 16 industry, government, and academic consortiums, spawned by Nasa money, continuing to work on space-related projects and experiments. Dr Bugg's work is with one such consortium.

John Glaab, manager of Nasa's small business and innovation researcb programme, says Congress and the President bave recognised the need for small businesses, inventors, and entrepreneurs to become interested in space experimentation. It is these small fry, not the big corporations, who are most likely to risk development of innovative products and process.

"We know a lot of these people are inexperienced, and we do everything we can to help them along. Glaab says of the 20,000 solicitations received by his office last year. Nasa saw potential merit in 2,000 of those, says Glaab, and sent those back with suggestions.

Ultimately, 206 proposals were accepted and sponsors given $50,000 and six months to come up with a project.

Bugg at the University of Alabama bas developed an experiment using space to grow high quality protein crystals. It will fly on the next sbuttle. But others won't be as fortunate, he says, pointing up problems with the system of getting business research projects into

The coldest wind tunnel in Europe bas just been taken into service at the German Aerospace Research Establishment DFVLR) in Cologne, where models are put through their paces at -173°C, a temperature at which proverbial Siberian cold is like a breath of

It's a scientific fact that if you peel potatoes or carrots you take away all the vitamins, but it's equally true that if you dice them into little cubes you also cut out all the taste. And gravy! It's a well koowo law of physics that gravy, being a liquid, helps you swallow better. But not the gravy at my school which acted more like cement, ooe mouthful and your entire digestive system weot into terminal clog. It felt as if your oesophagus was

They had two recipes for fish, one was called Fish Portuguese, the other was titled Fish Mornay. The type of fish they used was never identified, but it was more like meckintosh than mackerel, and full of bones. Fish Portuguese was dripping with red stuff, a sort of green pepper and tomato slime. Fish Mornay was served in its original sea water that had been flavoured with flour and a gram or two of something cheesy, probably socks.

liveat dishes usually involved mince because it is harder to identify the responsible animal.

School dinners

By Keith Wells

Obvious culprits like goat, camel or yak were soon dismissed and public opinion decided that minced buffalo was the most commonly used in the shepherd's pie while minced dog was preferred for the lasagne. Mashed potatoes were made from polyfilla or any acceptable substitute, such as dehydrated wallpaper. I'm not exactly sure what the verb 'to pud' means, but after a dose of our pudding you sure stayed pudded. It was a sort of grey dough, shaped like a torpedo that swelled up to three times its original size as sooo as it got into your stomach. It hloated up so much your skin became all tight and shiny and your belly buttoo turned inside out. After a while you forgot what the bathroom was for ... I began to think it was a sort of adjunct of the library, a small reading room where nothing much ever happened. Theo they'd dose us up with California Syrup of Figs, intestinal dynamite, a kind of human Drano! Two or three spoonfuls of that stuff and too much was happening!

And the custard! They served it in a jug but when you turned the jug upside down, nothing happened, that custard simply refused to obey the Law of Gravity. You had to dig it out with a spoon and it resisted like mad, finally giving way with a disgusting keerrifiopp, like a pig's trotter heaving up out of the clay and slime.

It wasn't just dinner either, breakfast was just as bad. Even the cereals only went sag, wrinkle, flop! They could do things with eggs that the plastics industry still hasn't patented. It's a little-known piece of history that the frisbee was invented et our school from e fried egg. They even ruined toast which came out looking and tasting like a page from a Dead Sea Scroll, Bacon! My God! Greasy wet sheets of rubbery, salty stuff that tasted as if it had been used as a gasket oo a draioage pump, you couldn't cut it with a knife, the hlade hounced off. In the old days that bacon would have been priceless as a substitute for chainmail. But it was a very economical form of catering. I'm sure they used the washing up water for the next day's soup.

The whole question of bad cooking reminds me of the time I cooked e meal for some outpatients at a halfway house for mental patients. The menu included potato pancakes. Now I wasn't exactly sure how to pan cake a potato, but I decided the best way would be to grate the potatoes, mould them into patties and then fry

If you have oever grated potatoes, my advice is don't bother. What havens is that after a few minutes they turn a sort of grey blue and dissolve into sludge, However, it was too late to substitute, so I then fried this grey blue sludge which promptly turbed into fried blue grey sludge. By the time my guests were sitting down to lunch I was frantic, I tried to explain that a disaster had occurred and that it would be better to send out for Kentucky Fried Dog or Wormburgers, or anything! But they wouldn't hear of it, and insisted oo trying my 'delicious' food. What followed was the most uncomfortable hour of my life. Ooohs and aaahs of delight greeted the sloppy pancakes that looked like slurry from a cobalt refinery, though it wasn't oearly so tasty. No matter. The assembled crew slurped it down and declared every mouthful was delicious.

The trouble was that they were all crazy, and desperate to prove they were getting saner. Any truly sane person would have spat out the first mouthful and demanded why I was trying to poison them. The crazies, on the other hand, went through an elaborate charade of normality, complete with flowery compliments and everyone requested a second helping. Which I served with a kind of generous malice.

TODAY'S CROSSWORD

By Brant Parker and Johnny Hart

SAYS HERE, 'INSIDE EVERY FAT PERSON IS A THIN PERSON CRYING TO GET OUT.'

... AND ALL THIS TIME I THOUGHT

YOU WERE JUST SNORING!

I WENT down to the post office the other day and it was locked tight.

"It's closed until the Fourth of July," a man who had been sleeping on the sidewalk said. "Are you homeless?" I asked him. "No," he said, "I'm just waiting to pick up a parcel post package of cookies my mother sent me for the post office won't open until the Fourth of July?" I asked. "It's all over town. They have a big deficit and this is the only way to make it up. unless they get a bank loan from Mexico. "But this is very important," I said, "If I can't mail it in by midnight I may not win a free sweepstakes cruise to Puerto Rico."

The man looked at my envelope. "This letter will never fly. It only has a 25cent stamp on it.'

"That's what the new price will be for first-class stamps.

"Do you think the post office can handle this envelope for two bits? It costs a fortune to deliver a letter on its appointed rounds through dark of night."

"So what stamp should I put on the envelope?"

"That's for each person to decide for himself - but . be generous. Remember, no one in the post office is there for the money."

"How can they operate the system at a profit if they keep their stations closed?"

"Very slowly. You see, in order to bring the deficit down they have to reduce the services most people expect. The fewer services the post office provides, the less it has to charge for its stamps. Heaven knows what a first-class stamp would cost if you had postal offices open all day

"I also see a mountain of junk mail." "That's not junk mail. Those are windows of opportunity which make it possible for people to win millions of dollars, cabin cruisers or new homes in Arizona, not to mention magazines full of lingerie ads. There are also thousands of catalogues that keep Hong Koog's

"I doubt it because this post office has been designated a 'Priority A' station, which means you can't mix first-class mail with junk mail.'

"Why not?" I asked. "You don't want to risk the first-class mail infecting the junk mail. A country that doesn't respect its fourth-class mail doesn't deserve to have an excellent postal system."

"Is there some station that is open on days other than July 4?"

"There is one in Maryland and one in Virginia, but nobody knows exactly where they're located, since they are mail drops for Ollie North."

I said, "Then I'm stuck with this post office." He told me, "You'll get

QUESTION: Is it OK for a pregnant woman to wear a seat belt?

ANSWER: Absolutely. A pregnant woman can and should wear a seat belt and shoulder harness if they are available. Io the United States, the largest cause of death in pregnant womeo is car accidents. In ooe study, 50 per ceot of meternal death occurred during automobile collisions.

Unfortunately, many pregnant women find being strapped in uncomfortable and fear that the seat belt could harm their foetus during an accident. The problem is, most women don't know how to properly position seat belts during pregnancy.

The seat belt should be placed as low as possible across the upper thighs. It should be fastened as snugly as is possible, while still remaining comfortable.

The shoulder belt should cross the hody between the hreasts, allowing as much as 3 inches of slack between the chest and belt. During a long drive, it may be oecessary to periodically readjust the seat belt and shoulder strap to maintain comfort and safety.

Cairo, Egypt's capital and largest city in Africa, sways with the movement of 14 million people — the ever-present multitudes. Located at the apex of the Delta, this great metropolis is the meeting place of Africa and Arabia, Europe and Asia.

Throughout most of its history. Cairo has been the bank and warehouse of East-West trade. Because of its location, it was the most convenient junction for the transshipment of goods, which arrived hy ship from the East via the Red Sea and from there were carried overland the short distance to Cairo. Here they were stored bought or sold, then Hoated Mediterranean and on to Ешгоре.

Few capitals in the world have quite the same all-encompassing position as Cairo does ioday. It is Egypt's economic, political, administrative, cultural, educational, entertainment, military, transportation, and historical centre -- all in one. Almost nothing happens in Egypt that does not happen in Cairo. This is at once its blessing and its curse.

Sightseeing

Cairo's four universities attract men and women from all over the Middle East, Asia and Africa, as they did in ancient times. Al Azhar, considered the oldest continuous university in history, is the most important centre of religious learning in the Muslim world. Cairo has fabulous museums, ehurches, and mosques. Its bazaars are the best in the eastern Mediterranean, set in narrow winding alleys in an atmosphere permeated with pices and incense.

CAIRO has a variety of night-

Many have romantic settings in outdoor gardens of terraces where sky. Some of the best night spots are the nightclubs and discotteques of hotels.

What to see in Cairo depends largely on the length of your visit and you interests. There is something for everyone, hut clearly there is a great deal more of certain things, such as antiquities, than in almost any other place in the world.

Itineraries can be based on visiting the sites in the order of their historie, artistic or archaeological importance or by exploring one district of Cairo at a time.

The first approach is proba-hly more useful for those whose time is limited because one can quickly make a list of priorities and design a sightseeing day

On the other hand, exploring one district of Cairo at a time is more fun, especially for those who plan an extended visit. In the long run, it might even be more productive because Cairo is a very large, sprawling city. It has the same congestion problems afflicting all big cities and one can waste a great deal of time in traffic. If you are not already traveling in a group, we would strongly recommend you join an organised city tour on your first visit to Cairo. It is the least costly way to tour and it will cnable you to cover most of the essentials in a short time. Unless you have a special interest in one aspect of Egypt, a generalised tour will be more satisfying than concentrating on only one aspect for the whole day. If, after one or two city tours, you want to strike out on your own, you will have a better idea of what to see and how to see it.

Hiring a car or taxi with or without a guide and planning your own itinerary enables you to see and remain at the places that interest you most, but it

Some, hut not all, operate their own tours of Cairo and Upper Egypt or can arrange them on short notice. The large companies, such as American Express and Misr Travel, have regularly scheduled tours that you can purchase and join with other travellers. As an example, the half-day Pyramid and Sphinx tour is L. E. 14. An all day Memphis and Sakkara, Pyramids and Sphinx tour is L.E. 25. Either a city tour or a tour of Old Cairo is L.E 15 each and the evening programme for the Sound and Light show at the Pyramids is L.E. 12.

How to get around: You may rent a car with or without a driver, to be picked up at the airport on arrival. Hertz and other international car rental firms have offices at Cairo airport and major hotels. This is particularly useful in helping foreigners cope with the taxi shortage and/or overcharge. On the first visit to Egypt, it is not recommend renuing a car without driver. Language becomes a problem when you strike out alone, and driving in Cairo is not easy. Besides, the cost of an English-speaking driver is so little (L.E.7 per day from Hertz) that it is worth it. We strongly recommend it for ised tour, and for business travellers who need to move around the city a great deal.

In the latter case, it is smart to hire a car and driver by the week or longer, especially if you are likely to have several appointments each day. A car and driver can save you hours of frustration as well as time.

Tips on visiting ancient tombs

A VISIT to the Egypuan Museum, or to Memphis and Sakkara, is only an introduction to the antiquities of Egypt.

THE fure of ancient Egypt is so great that travellers are seldom aware of the country's other attractions. But it is no exaggeration to say that if there were no Pyramids or A bu Simbel, no Valley of the Kings or Karnak Temple, Egypt would still be one of the most interesting countries in the world to visit.

Cauro has more magnificent

Cairo has more magnificent Islamic treasures than any city

well worth a visit.
Egypt's Christian bistory, which formed a hridge between the ancient world and the development of Western civilisation, is even less known and is almost completely overlooked by visitors today.

And none of these—ancient temples, old churches, magnificent mosques—acquaint traveller with the Egypt of today, a nation of 46 million people that is growing and developing with a new sense of its destiny; a nation that has changed more in the last thirty years than it has in the past thirty centuries. Yet, Egypt has not changed

Egypt is the cradle of history and burnan culture. Few countries in the world can trace their beginnings to so remote a time as the civilisation which developed along the banks of the Nile, the river which creates Egypt and makes it the most fertile country in North Africa.

It was the Nile that molded the character of the people, stimulating the ancient Egyptians to great physical and intellectual feats far in advance of their contemporaries. It was the bountiful Nile that made them the most prosperous, the most famous and the most civil-sed among the nations of antimity.

Now, as then, Egypt without the Nile would not exist.

Egypt's location has made it unique in another way too. Situated as it is in the northeast corner of Africa, throughout history Egypt has been a bridge between Asia and Europe, Africa and Asia; a bridge over which have passed Armies, commerce, people and ideas. It is no less true now than it was 4,000 years ago.

Planning your trip

When to go: Egypt is a yearround travel destination, but October through May is the ideal time to visit. Winter is considered the high season, especially at Luxor and Aswan in Upper Egypt which has been a popular winter resort for Europeans since Edwardian aristrocrats made it fashionahle.

The year-round climate in Cairo is very dry. In the winter months it is warm and comfortable by day but at night it can be cool enough for a light-the spring.

From June through September, Cairo is hot and Upper Egypt is very hot. However, leading hotels in Cairo, Luxor, and Aswan are air-conditioned, and if one is careful to sightsee in the early morning or late afternoon, it is oot unbearable.

Packaged Tours: Many tour operators offer packaged tours to Egypt which for one price include transportation, hotels, sightseeing and most meals. Such inclusive packages are the most economical and convenient way to visit Egypt and are strongly recommended, particularly for first-time visitors.

A large number of packages combine Egypt with several other Mediterranean or Middle Eastern destinations. Multistop packages are enticing, but are not recommended. On such tour, you will see the Pyramids and Sphinx, visit the Egyptian Museum and the old bazaars of Cairo — hut you will not see Egypt. There is too much to enjoy in Egypt to comhine it with a hurried trip through four or five countries in two or three weeks. Of necessity, the emphasis of any Middle East tour is on history, monuments and antiquities, and even the most avid history buff or amateur archaeologist may tire of too many museums and temples in a day. Moreover, if you combine too many countries on one tour the impressions run together. Egypt alone is more than worth a visit.

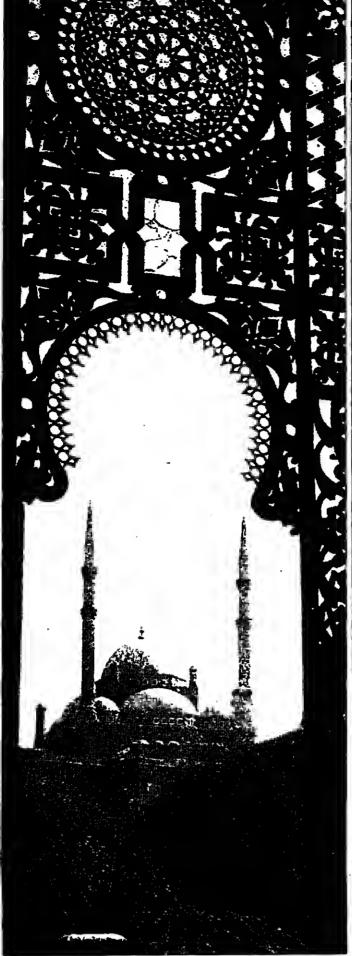

Passports and Visas: All visitors to Egypt must bold a valid passport or documents in lieu of passport. Egyptian consulates abroad are authorised to issue entry visas for tourists valid for 30 days and renewable for six months.

Currency

The unit of currency is the Egyptian pound (L.E.). It is divided into 100 piasters. Each piaster is subdivided into 10 milliemes. Pounds can be written in the following way: L.E. 1 or L.E. 1.000 or 100 pt. (i.e. one hundred piasters). (K.D. 1 equals L.E. 8 (approx.)

It is the first stage of a longrange programme to create an open market for currency exchange. Tourists and certain other commercial sectors benefit from the new rate, which is now set at L.E. 1 = U.S. $2.15 or U.S. $1 = .46 piatres. Taking a cruise into history

A VOYAGE up the Nile by steamer is one of the most delightful trips in Egypt, and now with 75 boats — a seven-fold increase in the past decade — supply has matched

- supply has matched demand. Most of the new vessels are in the four-and-five-star categories and offer three-to five-night cruises between Luxor and Aswan, plus Abydos and Deoderah; or seven-and 11-night excursions that travel to Middle Egypt or sail between Cairo and Luxor/Aswan.

Prices start at $45 per persoo per day for four-star ships; $90 per person per day for five-star, during the high season mooths of October through April; and $35 for four-star and $65 for five-star from May to September. However, prices vary greatly and are curreotly being discounted as much as 50 per cent because of the oversupply. It pays to shop around. Generally, prices include all meals and sightseeing in the company of a trained guide or Egyptologist.

A cruise on the Nile differs from ocean cruising in several ways. Nile steamers, compared to ocean-going cruises ships, are small and cozy like a yacht and have informed and comfortable atmospheres. Some ships accommodate as few as 20 passengers, while the largest take up to 152 people.

Staterooms, slightly smaller than those of standard cruise ships, are comparable in size to cahins on ships that sail the Greek islands. They are well-appointed and comfortable. Most are fitted with twin lower beds; some have wall pull-down bunks for a third person, dressing table or nightstand, closet, and private bath with shower. Ships with suites often have full bath with tub. Four and five-star ships are fully airconditioned.

Small ship size limits the recreational and entertainment facilities, but these are not important considerations on a Nile cruise where the attractions are the antiquities and the scenic countryside. On the other hand, ships holding 80 or more passengers have being for reading and relaxing, bar, sundeck, swimming pool, pleasant diving room with full Egypt without the River Nile seems inconceivable. And one of the most delightful trips you can take in Egypt is a cruise down this ancient river and appreciate why the country is known as the gift of the Nile.

Nile steamers compared in ocean-going ships, are small and cosy and have informal and comfortable atmospheres.

table service and evening entertainment. Laundry services and hair saloon are also available

Nile cruises begin in one of three places — Cairo, Luxor, or Aswan. More and more companies are offering long cruises throughout the year because they are increasingly popular and because the new ships are air-conditioned.

Passengers who begin their cruise in Upper Egypt usually travel to Luxor or Aswan by plane or train. In Luxor, a town next to the ancient site of Theber the shipt cack on the east bank of the river near the Etap and Winter Palace hotels, within walking distance of Luxor Temple and the Luxor Museum, and a short carriage ride from Karnak Temple, the most colossal ancient monument in the world.

Sightseeing includes a full day on the West Bank of the Nile, in the Valley of the Kings, where the tombs of Tutankhamun and other pharoahs were found; the Valley of the Queens; the Tombs of the Nobles, which contain some of the most important art of ancient Egypt; and other great temples and monuments.

sail downstream (north) to visit the Temples of Abydos and Denderah; others take in only the sites between Luxor and Aswan. Abydos is one of the oldest sites of worship in the world and, because of its art, is considered the most important temple in Egypt. Tours beyond Abydos are available on longer cruises which stop at Tel Al Amarna, the capital of Pharoah Akhenaton and his beautiful wife, Nefertiti; at Minya, the largest town of central Egypt; and at Beni Hassan, site of 12th century tombs—unusual tomb drawings show ancient Egyptiaos practicing judo and playing hall games that appear to be similar to those we play today.

From Luxor, ships also sail upstream (south) to Aswan, and stop for sightseeing at Esna, Edfu, and Kom Ombo—all sites of temples dating from the Ptolemic and Greek periods. If the cruise begins in Aswan, the same itinerary is followed in reverse order, sailing downstream to Luxor.

Aswan was the capital of Nubia and an important trading place in ancient times. Today, it is primarily a winter resort and the administrative centre for the High Dam and the surrounding region. Aswan is dotted with antiquities, most importantly the Temple of Philae, which is located on an island in the middle of the river.

Egypt without the Nile River seems inconceivable. One's first view of the river snaking its way through the desert is a dramatic illustration of its importance throughout Egypt's history. Beyond the ribbon of green—the land irrigated hy the Nile—the desert begins and stretches endlessly into the borizon on both sides.

The Nile flows so gently that ships glide almost imperceptably. The banks of the river are never more than a short distance away, and passengers can enjoy a close view of rural life in Upper Egypt. Life on the land bridges centuries. Cruise passengers see scenes along the river banks and in the green fields that replicate ancient drawings on the walls of the temples and tombs. The sense of endless time and transmility is almost overwhelming, particularly in contrast to the roar and clamour of Cairo.

Islamic monuments in Egypt

VISITORS to Egypt find it remarkable that the story of a civilisation more than 50 centuries old could be so eloquently told by the variety of monuments which stand throughout the land.

Boro on the banks of the Nile as early as the third millennium B.C.. Egyptian civilisation developed to achieve unprecedented peaks in architecture, sculpture and painting.

True, its development was interrupted for hrief periods during the Persian, Greek and Roman invasions, but the advent of Islam early in the seventh century A.D. ushered in a new era and Al Fustat, the first liberate ceptal of Fayet (founded by Amir Ibn Al Aas in 641 A.D.) marked a definite turning point.

Islamic intellectual revival, particularly in the natural sciences and philosophy, was still developed under the various dynasties that ruled Islamic Egypt — the Omayyads, the Toulounids, the Fatimids, the Ayyoubids, the Mamelukes, and, finally, the Ottomans.

The Islamic monuments in Cairo

Amr Ihn Al Aas Mosque
This was huilt in 642 A.D.
(11AH) to the Earth of the Babylon fortress, and is, therefore, the first mosque to be built in Egypt. It is simple in design; its original pillars were made of palm tree trunks and the roof of palm tree leaves.
Improvements were introduced over the years, as well as accretions of various kinds.

Today the mosque consists of a vast open courtyard surrounded hy four loggias, the largest being the one containing the prayer niche, facing Mecca. It has marble columns of differerent styles and some of its walls are panelled with wood carvings depicting Byzantine florat designs (mainly grapevines).

Ibn Touloun Mosque
This was built during the reign of El Emir Ahmed Ibn Touloun in 879 A.D. (265 AH) and is one of the largest and oldest in Egypt. It still retains its original architectural character. Its design is simple, consisting of an open courty ard with an ablution facility in the middle surrounded by four loggias, the biggest being the one

The mosque of Qalawoon containing the prayer niche.

The southern, western and northern parts have been enlarged and surrounded by high walls. Red bricks have been used throughout in the same style as the Samarra Mosque in Iraq. The pointed arches of the loggias rest on round bases, and are all decorated, from top to bottom, with Horal and geometrical designs. Archshaped apertures in the bases help to lighten the load.

The walls of the mosque are

The walls of the mosque are decorated by 128 latticed windows of various types. The niche itself is covered with marhle and gold mosaic and surrounded by four pillars of marble with floral-shaped capitals. The pulpit is made of wood and dates hack to Mameluke times. It is a masterpiece of fine Islamic art and its inlays are the most beautiful in the history of Islamic art.

The present minaret of this mosque was built in 1926 A.D. (696 AH) by Sultan Al Mansouri in place of the original one which bad fallen into ruin. This is built of stone and has a winding external staircase and a square base, more or less like the old one. The horseshoe arches at the base suggest Andalusian rather than contemporary influences A board showing the history of the mosque attracts the attention of visitors, apart from the Fatimid prayer niches in the bases of some of the columns in the central loggia overlooking the court.

The hospital, school and dome of Qalawoon (1285 A.D. — 684 AH)

This is a superb amalgam of monuments, in Al Mu'izz Lidin Allah street, at the northern end of the goldsmiths' market. Built by Sullan Al Mansour Qalawoon, it comprises a hospital, a mosque (including a school) and a magnificent dome standing over his tomb. Aesthetically, this cluster of buildings is very rich and inspir-mg.

The dome itself is a rare masterpiece of Islamic art: its outer surface is covered with marble inlaid with mother of pearl, and its inside is covered with golden inscriptions. Its high prayer niche is unparalleled in its exquisite marhle decorations. From top to bottom the dome is covered with hright-coloured decorations and gilt. On the northern side of the dome stands an enormous minaret which was restored by the Sultan's son Al Nasser Mohammed in 1303 A.D.

Al Hakem Mosque (1012 A.D.—430 AH).

This is situated at the end of Al Mu'izz Lidin Allah Street. Though work started on it in the days of Al Aziz, the second Fatimid Caliph of Egypt, in 990 A.D., it was destined to bear the name of a later Calipb — Al Hakem Bi'amr Allab. The mosque, which is an architectural masterpiece by any standard, was originally situated just outside the old city walls of Cairo, that is, facing the Bab-Alfutuh city gates, but, as the city expanded in the days of Badr Al Jamali, the Fatimid Prime Minister, new city walls were built to enclose the

After the Cairo earthquake of 1302 A.D., a Mameluke Emir by the name of Baybars Al Jankiez ordered major repair and reconstruction work on the mosque, and arranged for "Islamic sciences" to be taught in it.

Al Agmar Mosque: (1125 A.D. —519 AH.)

This is situated also in Al Mu'izz Lidin Allah street, and was built on orders of Calipb Al Aamer Bi'Ahkam Allah. It is one of the rare Fatimid monuments which are relatively well preserved. Its face is decorated with Kufic inscriptions.

Al Salih Tala'ie Mosque: (1160 A.D. — 555 AH.)

Standing close to Bah Zuweila, at the crossing of Ahmed Maher and Al Suroujiyyah streets, this is one the most beautiful Fatimid monuments in Cairo. A Mameluke ruler of Egypt, Buqtumur, introduced certain architectural changes, including a rare wooden pulpit, which have enhanced its beauty.

JUNIOR TIMES

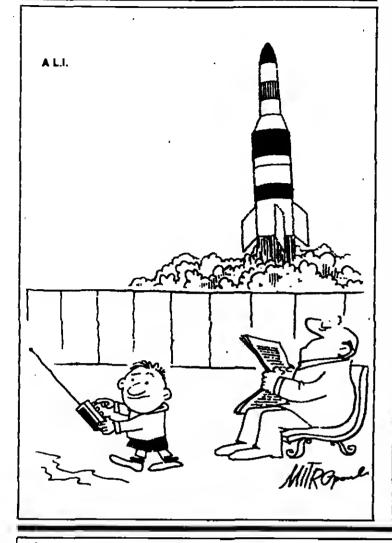

As you are probably aware, it is traffic week in Kuwait.

Dear Junior Readers.

Traffic rules apply to all of us whether we drive or not, and you can help avoid traffic accidents by crossing the road property. Remember the galden rule. Look left ,look right and only when you are absolutely sure it's safe, make the crossing.

if you are in doubt, then it's probably better to wait until the car passes, even if your companion is beckoning from the other side of the road urging haste. Have a good week-end.

Aunt Barbara

NEAR the town of Shrewsbury in England, there is a great hill called the Wrekin. Some people tell this story of how it came to be there.

THERE was once a giant. who was fierce, and strong, and huge.

No one would have thought much about him except that he was not only fierce, and strong and

He was also MEAN. Every morning when the giant woke up, he stretched and yawned and roared. And after he had his hreakfast (I wouldn't dare tell you what he had), he said to himself:

What mean, horrid, wicked thing can I do today?"

He usually thought of something. Sometimes he trampled all the fields flat and spoiled the farmers' crops. Sometimes he blew out all the cooking-fires at once. Then the farmers' wives had to start them all over again. Sometimes he stole all the bells from all the church steeples for miles around. Then nobody woke up on time or knew when to go to church.

Sometimes he frightened all the animals out of the forest, and all the hunters came home emptyhanded, and there was nothing to eat hut potatoes and cahbage soup.

One morning, however, the giant woke up with a terrible stomach-ache. It must have been his dinner. (I wouldn't dare tell you who his dinner was.) And he felt so mean that he decided to do something. He decided to do something much worse than anything he had ever done before.

He decided to take a great shovelful of earth and dump it into the river and make a flood that would drown the town of Shrewsbury everyhody in it.

So he took his giant shovel and he dug a giant shovelful of earth — such a giant shovelful of earth that even he could hardly carry it. And he started on the road to Shrewsbury.

When the townspeople heard that the giant was they were coming, they were terrified. They all ran to hide in their cellars - all hut a cohbler who happened to be in Shrewshury at the time. He lived in the next town, but did all the shoe repairing for Shrewsbury too. This cobbler was skinny, and weak and cowardly.

And he would have been hiding in a cellar like everyone else - except that he was not only. skinny, and weak and cowardly. He was also very hungry. And he couldn't help thinking of the fine little supper his pretty little wife was preparing for him in his nice little house in the next town. So he picked up the bag full of hroken-down, worn-out shoes the people in Shrewshury had given him to repair. And he threw the bag over his shoulder and started for home.

"No, no, you must hide!" the people cried to him from their cellar doors.

"I'll hide when I get home," said the cobbler. "Besides, why would a giant hurt a poor cobbler like me?"

"And why do you think we don't have a cobbler of our own?" the people cried.

But the cobhler wouldn't listen to them. Off he went, down the road, with his big bag full of shoes.

He walked and walked, thinking of his pretty little wife in his warm little house cooking delicious little supper. He was still thinking of these things and licking his lips when suddenly he stopped.

Something was in his way. A great, enormous shoe stood in the road.

"Good heavens." said the cohbler to himself, "I hope I don't ever have to repair a shoe as big as

And he looked up, and up, and up, and he began to tremble with fright. For in the shoe was a foot. And above the foot was a leg. And on top of that was a great, towering giant carrying a huge shovelful of earth.

"Am I on the right road to Shrewsbury?" roared the giant. "Answer me, you skinny little worm of a

The poor combler shook in his boots, but he was able to squeak out, "Oh, are you going all the way to Shrewshury?"

"Yes, I am going all the way to Shrewshury,' roared the giant. "And when I get there, I am going to dam up the river and drown the whole town.'

The cohhler thought of all his nice customers being drowned while hiding in their cellars. It was a terri-hle thought. Something had to be done.

He looked at the giant. The giant was panting and puffing as he stood there holding the heavy shovelful of earth.

"You mean you're planning to carry that all the way to Shrewsbury?" the cohler asked.

"What do you mean all the way?" growled the giant. "Why do yon keep saying all the way? If this is the right road to Shrewshury, I must be almost there!"

The cohbler sighed and put his bag down. "But haven't you heard?" he said. "They moved it." "Moved what?" roared the giant.

"Moved Shrewsbury," said the cobbler. "Where to?" asked the giant. "How far?" "Well, just look in here," said the cobbler, opening his bag, "and tell me what you see." The giant bent over and pecked in the bag. Why, just a lot of wornout shoes and boots," he said.

"Exactly," said the cob-hler. "And now do you see why you'll never get to Shrewshury with that great heavy shovelful of earth?" "No, I don't see," said the giant. "Why?"

The cobhler shut his bag tight and threw it over his shoulder with a sigh. "Because those are all the shoes I've worn out so far, just since leaving Shrews-bury," he said. "And I'm going to be late for supper, besides!"

And the cobbler, who was skinny, and weak, and cowardly, and hungry, hut also rather clever, went on his way down the road to his pretty little wife who had a mouth-watering dinner all ready for him.

As for the giant, he simply gave up. He threw down his shovelful of earth - and what a big hill it made! - and then he sat down and wept, giving up forever the whole idea of going to Shrewsbury, for he was not only fierce, and strong, and huge, and mean — he was also STUPID.

And a good thing, too.

THE origin of this month's name is obscure. Some scholars believe the Latin Aprillis is derived from the name of the Greek goddess of love Aphrodite, whose Roman festival occurred on April 1. On the other hand April is a burgeoning month, associated with hirth, freshness and the heginning of spring. It has therefore been suggested that its name may come from the Latin. aperire, to open. If so, it is the only month named according to its seasonal significance, and it is interesting to note that its Anglo-Saxon name was Eostre or Eastreindustry dialysis affect vester- was a realistic moved thanom

This has been a good month for people who imposed their opinions on others — the dictators' month, it might be said. St Louis of France (the first crusader), Oliver Cromwell, Vladimir Lenin, Adolf Hitler, Hirohito (Emperor of Japan), Alexander II (Emperor of all the Russias), Antonio Salazar of Portugal, and even Great Dictator Charlie Chaplin, were all born in April.

Giving the month an artistic flavour are Leonardo da Vinci, Hans Christian Andersen, William Wordsworth, Sergei Rachmaninov and Gaetano Bonizetti.

Feasts and festivals

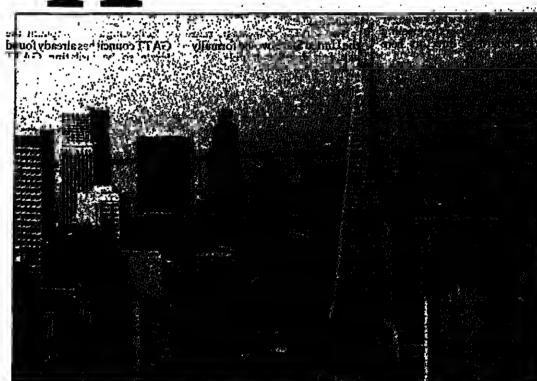

The Hindu New Year New Baisakhi can also be celebrated in April with the giving of presents, feasting, praying and hathing in the sacred waters of the Ganges.

April is often the month when the hirth, enlightenment and death of the Buddha (Gautama Siddhartha 2563 483 BC) are celebrated simultaneously in the festival of Vesak.

Worst earthquake

THE worst earthquake to hit a city in modern times was the one that virtually destroyed San Francisco on April 18, 1906. The shockwaves were felt 600 miles away. Buildings collapsed, water mains hurst and fires broke out. There was panic in the streets. Twenty-three babies were born on the lawns of Golden Gate Park. Four out of every five of the city's huildings were destroyed.

The magnificence of modern San Francisco rose from the ashes. The new buildings are earthquake proof.

While you are guarded in another room, the group selects some object in plain view of everyone. You return and various things around the room are named one after another. When the right object is named you instantly verify it as the selected one! The preparation:

Once again your confederate either can be a secret or openly can be your special assistant. How does your assistant know when to indicate the proper object! He doesn't! The secret of this very baffling and unfathomahle mystery is that you are the one to do the signalling. Read on! The trick:

You come hack into the room and your friend starts naming or pointing to objects in different parts of the room (1). Four, five, or six objects are named and when you want the selected object to be named you merely do something to change your position: fold or unfold your arms, shift one foot, put your hands behind you, or any other natural and subtle movement (2). As soon as your confederate sees you do this, the next object he or she names must be the selected one. As soon as it is, you name it as the group's choice.

Just this once, let yourself be pressured into doing the same trick twice, or even three times, as the fun and frustration grow. The insidious subtlety of this particular while-I'm-out-of-the-room trick is that everyone is watching and listening to your assistant, waiting for a signal that will never come. It's all in knowing how.

IBM opposed to ending

NEW YORK, March 30, (Reuter): International Business Machines Corp, which sold off its South African subsidiary last year, said yesterday it opposed a shareholder proposal that it cease sales to the former unit, now owned by local employees. As part of the sale of Information Services Management (Pty) Ltd, one of a series of divestitures by US corporations reacting to protests against South Africa's racial policies, IBM granted the firm exclusive rights to sell IBM gear and services in South Africa. IBM said in a proxy statement to shareholders that several church groups and individual stockholders had proposed that the chard's highest and individual stockholders had proposed that the world's biggest computer maker end sales to ISM. The proposal, to be voted on by shareholders at IBM's annual meeting on April 25, argues that IBM's products help perpetuate apartheid, South Africa's policy of racial separation. "While not deliberately unfair, IBM's sales patterns fit and maintain the apartheid model of inequality and white supremacy," the share-bolder proposal says. It says ISM sales are about $250 million a year. IBM defended its relationship with ISM, arguing that ISM committed to fair amplement precision.

Bonds and treasury bills | UAE will have to issue bonds: Al Hamar will cover deficit: Khorafi

LONDON, March 30, (Kuna): Kuwaiti Finance Minister Jasem Al Khorafi said in a press statement here today that the present government bonds and treasury bills are enough to secure the necessary liquidity to cover the expected deficit in the state's budget for the fiscal year

He added in an interview with the London-based Arab magazine Al Majalla, that the duration of these bonds and bills is 10 years, expressing hope that this liquidity would be enough. Otherwise a new law should be issued for other years.

He added that the government's expenditure was high during the rise of oil prices "hut we should seek expenditure rationalisation to go in co-herence with our (financial) capabilities."

On the effects of the Iraq-Iran war on Kuwait's economy, the Kuwaiti official said that 'trade transit' is the most economical sector that was affected by the Iraq-Iran war.

On the unified economic agreement between the Gulf Cooperation Council states, Khorafi said the delay in applying this agreement was due to different capabilities of each member country, stressing that sacrifices are needed to achieve the unified Gulf market.

ABU DHABI, March 30, (Reuter): The UAE must issue boods to finance the nation's persistent budget deficit and tackle the problem caused by falling oil prices. Central Bank governor Abdul Malik Al Hamar said.

He warned that the recent decline on the world oil market would raise the deficit on this year's combined federal and local hudget for the confederauon of seven emirates.

Tackle Al Hamar told Reuters in an interview: "Bonds have become indispensable to tackle the (budget) problem."

The UAE said early this month it would issue bonds worth between two hillion and three billion dirhams ($540 to 800 million), but has not said when they will be floated.

The Central Bank governor was speaking late last afternoon before news broke that Saudi Arabia is postponing its planned issue of government bonds. Ban-kers in the kingdom said that decision appeared to have been prompted partially by objections from the country's conservative religious bodies. In the UAE, sharp spending cuts and the introduction of import taxes and services fees have failed to eliminate budget deficits in the face of declining oil

Al Hamar said: "Issuing of medium and long-term bonds would not only radically cut the deficit hut also would attract part of our overseas investment and help remove constraints on government plans due to unstable oil prices. Haived

Oil provides more than 80 per cent of the UAE's revenues and declining prices and production have almost halved income from 60 hillion dirbams ($16.3 billion) in 1985 to 33 billion dirhams ($9.0 billion) in 1987.

Despite austerity measures, the federal hudget deficit has persisted and more than doubled in 1987 to 2.75 hillion dirhams ($750 million) from that of the previous year. The federal hudget is financed from half the income of each of the seven emirates making up the UAE - Abu Dhabi, Dubai, Sharjah, Ras Al Khaimah, Aiman, Umm Al Qaiwain, and Fujairah. According to Al Hamar, the deficit for the combined hudget, taking in the federal and iodividual emirate levels, fell to 10.9 hillion dirhams ($3.0 billion) in 1987 from 13.9 billion dirhams ($3.8 billioo) in 1986.

South Korea's current account surplus doubles

SEOUL, March 30, (AP): Due to strong exports, South Korea's current account surplus in February doubled to $956 million from last year's $461 million, the Bank of Korea reported today. The bank reported the surplus in the first two months of this year as $1.74 hillion, up from $1.23 billion in the same period last year. Bank officials said that with present trends, the surplus is certain to exceed the government's year-end projection of $7 billion. An International Monetary Fund mission which was here last week predicted that the surplus could reach $11 billion. The central bank said the trade surplus in February rose to $742 million, ap 160 per cent from 285 million a year earlier. The trade surplus in January-February widened to $1.42 billion from $930 million a year ago. Merchandise exports in the first two months rose to $8.12 billion from $5.78 billion one year ago, while imports increased from $4.85 billion to $6.7 billion, bank officials said.

to delay some debt repayments

BEIRUT, March 30, (Reuter): Lebanon won agreement from France and two other foreign creditors to delay repayments on its foreign debt, the first official postponement by the war-torn nation, Central Bank sources said today. They said the French government, which lends to Lebanon under a financial protocol, the European Investment Bank and Abu Dhabi Investment Fund accepted a request made in late 1987 to postpone payments for a few months. The delay was sought as Lebanon's foreign reserves slumped to just $334 million from $461 million at the end of 1986 amid a crisis of confidence in the economy. The Central Bank sources said it was accepted "on a friendly basis" and had been sought partly because of bureancratic difficulties in making payments caused by the division of Beirut into Christian and Muslim sectors in the 13-year civil war.

Abu Dhabi and Pakistan agree to build refinery near Karachi

ABU DHABI, March 30, (Opecna): The government of Abn Dhabi and Pakistan have agreed to build an oil refinery near Karachi through the Pak-Arab Refinery Company (Parco), a joint venture set up in Officials from both sides told a press conference in Abu Dhabi yesterday the refinery, with a projected capacity of 80,000 b/d, would be set up in Multan, some 800 kilometres north of Karachi. It would be the first to be built by the company.

The announcement was made by Youssef Al Noweis, director of the finance department at the Abu Dhabi National Oil Company (Adnoc), after the meeting of the board of threetors here lestering.

He said details of the project, including its cost and crude oil supplies from Abu Dhabi, would be finalised after a joint study to be held later on the feasibility of the project. On the performance of Parco, be said the company realised profits during the past few years.

Parco was set up in 1974 as a joint venture beld 40 per cent by Adnoc and 60 per cent by the Pakistani government for the production and transport of refined oil products in Pakistan.

banks in this century. Besides the provisions, Standard Chartered said that bad and doubtful loans in Canada and Malaysia as well as by its Califor-

Standard Chartered made a charge of £234 million ($435 million) for bad and doubtful debts in 1987, up 27 per cent from

"While a large part of this heavy charge was undoubtedly due to economic reasons, management failure was also a sig-nificant factor," Graham said. "Remedial action has been taken." About 90 per cent of the total involved loans made in Malaysia and Canada and loans made by Union Bank of California and United Bank of Arizona. Standard Chartered is selling Union Bank, California's fifth biggest, to a Bank of Tokyo affiliate for $750 million, while the Arizona Bank is going to Citicorp for $210 million.

It also sold its remaining 39 per cent interest in a South African bank last year.

Standard Chartered said that, as of the end of 1987, it had lent a total of £2.47 billion ($4.59 billion) to 32 countries designated as baving problems paying off their debt.

But it set aside £519 million ($965 million) last year io a reserve to cover possible losses on these loans. After counting the funds it set aside before 1987, the bank's provisions cover about 25 per cent of these loans.

The loans include £634 million ($1.18 billioo) in South Africa. £390 million ($725 million) in Nigeria. £325 million ($604 million) in Mexico and £311 millioo ($578 million) in Brazil.

1,758.2, HAVING REACHED A HIGH ON THE DAY OF 1,775.B AT 092B GMT. VOLUME REMAINED LOW BUT WAS SLIGHTLY HIGHER THAN YESTEROAY GEALERS SAID THE MARKET WAS ALSO DUIET AHEAD OF U.K. CHAHCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER NIGEL LAWSON'S APPEARANCE BEFORE PARLIAMENT'S TREASURY COMMITTEE SCHEDULED FOR 1530 GMT.

LAWSON MAY GIVE SOME CLUES ON THE GOVERNMENT'S POLICY ON STERLING. THERE WERE SOME RUMOURS CIRCULATING IN THE FOREIGN EXCHANGE MARKETS THIS MORNING THAT THE BANK OF ENGLAND MIGHT HAVE AGAIN BEEN STEMMING THE POUND'S RISE.

IN LATE TRADING, THE POUND STOOD AT AROUND 3.1075 MARKS BUT HAD HELD NARROWLY FOR MOST OF THE DAY AHEAD OF LAWSON'S REMARKS. THE OOLLAR WAS FIRMER BUT LEADING INTERMATIONAL ISSUES STILL POSTED MODEST LOSSES.

London Gold

LONDON, MARCH 30, REUTER - GOLD BULLION ENDED AT 453.50/454.00 OLRS AN OUNCE AFTER A OULL SESSION, SLIGHTLY OOWN FROM THE PREVIOUS CLOSING 455.25/455.75. PRICES HELO IN A TIGHT RANGE IN UNEXCITING TRADING, WITH A FAILURE TO CONSOLIOATE ABOVE 455 OLRS KEEPING A LID ON THE MARKET, DEALERS SAID. THE NETAL WAS FIXED IN THE AFTERNOON AT 453.75 OLRS AN QUINCE, NEAR THE SESSION LOW. THE DAY'S HIGH WAS 454.75/455.25 OLRS, BUT RESISTANCE ABOVE 455 DLRS INHIBITED ANY FURTHER ADVANCE, THEY SAID. CEALERS PREDICTED PRICES WILL STAY IN THE CURRENT RANGE AHEAD OF THE EASTER HOLIDAY WEEKENO.

Lendon Money Market

LONDON, MARCH 30, REUTER - U.K. MONEY MARKET RATES WERE UP TO 1/16 POINT EASIER IN LATE TRADING THAN ON TUESDAY BUT BARELY CHANGED FROM OPENING LEVELS AS OPERATORS AWAITED DETAILS OF CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER NIGEL LAWSON'S COMMENTS TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS TREASURY COMMITTEE, GEALERS SAIG. THE MONEY MARKET'S EASIER TONE WAS ATTRIBUTED TO STERLING'S

-FIRM SHOWING ON THE FOREIGN EXCHANGES. IN EARLY TRADING, THE POUND HAD STRADOLEO 3.11 MARKS, THE LEVEL THAT TRIGGERED THE MARCH 17 HALF POINT BASE RATE CUT, DEALERS SAID.

STERLING LATER EASED AND TOWARDS THE LONDON CLOSE WAS QUOTED ONLY SLIGHTLY FIRMER THAN TUESDAY'S FINISH OF 3.1055/90 MARKS.

UN official predicts oil price will go up

UNITED NATIONS, March 30, (Opecna): Nicky Beredjick, director of the Natural Resources and Energy Division of the UN Department of Technical Cooperation for Development, said yesterday that soooer or later, "oil prices may become tight and prices will consequen-

Speaking at the start of the debate in the committee oo the development of new and renewahle sources of energy, the senior UN official said the present situation of petroleum abun-dance was likely to change in the loog run.

Given the lead times for development and deployment of new sources, there could be no let-up in the quest for environmentally acceptable and lowcost alternative energy sources, he said, adding that for many people in the rural areas of the developing world, providing small amounts of electrical energy for essential services and fuelwood for cooking and heating was important.

He said his department was currently responsible for dishursing some $10 million annually from the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and trust fuods for projects in energy plaoning, solar, wind and biomass, and mini-hydropower.

An additional $25 million, cootributed by Italy, had been devoted to geothermal energy projects over the past two years, Beredjick said,

He said his department had worked towards establishing reliable systems of information for energy planoed and plao execution. It had developed, in cooperation with Japan. a software package called "enerplan" which allowed energy planners to huild models for simulating ecooomic and energy systems.

Another new area of major conceotration was energy cooservation within the framework of the national energy policy, iocluding promotion of energy audits, application of energy savings management procedures and investments in key energyrelated industries.

Dollar firms as world watches Japanese traders meet in Bahrain

LONDON, March 30, (Reuter): Tokyo shares soared and the dollar firmed today as investors prepared for the huge movements of money they still expect to follow the eod of Japan's fiscal year tomorrow.

Few are confident they know where the mooey will go, but many are guessing the Tokyo Stock Market will see much of it. And, as earlier fears faded that big Japanese investors might sell dollar assets, the dollar edged higher, up 0.75 pfennig and half a yen to just under 1.67 West Ger-man marks and around 125.25 Japanese yen. Boosted In London the British pound has jumped to its highest level in two years, boosted by a stroog economy, Britain's relatively high interest rates and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's unrelenting grip on inflation.

Sterling had held relatively steady for 12 months and was uncapped when the Conservative government decided earlier this month to ease central bank intervention and allow the pound to rise against a previous target against the West German

"It is a currency renaissance." said Keith Skeoch, chief ecooomist at the London investment firm James Capel and Co. "What we're beginning to see is the transition of sterling from being one of the weaker brethren among the international currencies to one of the stronger."

Jonathan Lopatin, vicepresident for foreign exchange dealing at Goldman Sachs and Co. in London, said, "the authorities decided to allow sterling exchange rates to rise."

The Bank of England's index measuring the pound's tradeweighted value against 17 currencies finished at 77.7 today, uocbaoged from yesterday, when it rose 0.6 point to reach its highest level sioce Jan 16, 1986, when it closed at 78.

Quoted

The pound was quoted at 3.1225 West German marks late this afternoon in Londoo, up from 3.1069 marks yesterday and $1.8790 versus $1.8705. The price of gold was fixed in London this morning at $454 an ounce, down 90 cents from last afternooo. Oil prices were little changed, with Brent crude oil from the North Sea seiling at $15.85 a barrel for May delivery.

In Tokyo, the world's biggest stock market, the 225-share Nikkei index jumped 366.98 points to 26,320.07 — just 1.2 per cent below its all time peak, set on October 14 just before the global crasb. It rose oearly 1,000 points sioce Monday.

Consider

"The market is extremely strong," said Yozo Asai of Yamaichi Securities Co. in Tokyo. "It is rising at a feverish pitch."

Japaoese tax chaoges, especially an income tax on interest, which take effect oo Friday could mean hig changes in the Tokyo stock market.

"The custom has been that if you save a little money, you put it in a tax-free, fixed-interest investment ... now that is gone, people have to consider capital gains. Managing cash is a new coo-cept," said Hideo Nakazawa, general manager of the equities department of Nomura Securities Co. Ltd, in Tokyo.

Meanwhile, the dollar's firm tone huoyed European share prices. But trading was quiet ahead of the long Easter week-

London's FTSE Index of 100 Blue Chip shares rose more than 10 points by midmorning to hriefly trade above 11.775 but tailed off slightly towardes 0000.

Frankfurt's 30-share Boersen-Zeitung Index rose 1.24 points to 294.78 and the Paris Bourse indicator rose 0.49 per cent. Hong Kong's Hang Seng index was up 7.31 points to 2,528.92 and Sydney's All Ordinaries Index rose 20.4 points to 1,416.4. Priced out

A firm dollar eases investors worries that European and Asia companies' could be priced out of key foreign markets, but many dealers say they are not sure the pressure is off the dollar.

They say they have been unset-tled by US and Japanese central banks intervention to prop the dollar's value. The Bank of Japan has been buying dollars all week, and the US Federal Reserve joined in yesterday, after European markets closed.

"The market was quite surprised by the Fed's intervection and wants to wait and see what bappens in April," said Connie Hubert, a trader at manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. in Frankfurt.

"I was surprised that the Fed would intervene at that point. But if it keeps the market offguard and comes in at the same levels or higher each time, it provides a modicum of support for the dollar," said Robert White of First Interstate Bank in Los Angeles.

Stepped

Some dealers said the central banks probably stepped into the currency markets to cool off a selling spree that had been set off by speculation that Japanese insurgence companies were gearing up to dump dollar holdings after March 31.

"Life insurance companies do not seem to want to sell the dollar now," said Koichiro Oka, chief customer dealer with Fuji Bank Ltd in Tokyo.

Fed keeping currency market guessing

NEW YORK, March 30, (Reuter): The US Federal Reserve has had some success in preventing a further drop io the dollar through an inscrutable intervention strategy that has thrown the currency markets off balance, dealers said yesterday.

Central banks routinely support currencies hy huying at a central level, but dealers say the Fed, the US central bank, has recently achieved a level of sophistication in market iotervention that eludes quick intervention. Strange

"There's something strange about the way the Fed is doing things. But if it cao keep people off balance it can postpooe pres-sure on the dollar," said one dealer with a US bank.

Dealers reported the Fed bought dollars yesterday morning when the US currency was at 124.50 yen. They said they were stunned when the central bank came back io the afternoon to huy dollars around 124.70 yen.

"I was surprised that the Fed would intervece at that point. But if it keeps the market offguard-and comes in at the same levels of higher each time, it provides a modicum of support for the dollar," said Robert White of First Interstate Bank io Los Angeles.

Dealers said they doubt the Fed is intent on keeping the dollar at a specific level, bot instead is tinkering with the market's psychology. The Fed traditionally does not discuss its interventioo in the currency markets.

You can't tell much by looking at the levels the Fed has been in. Maybe it's trying to get the message across that it is still committed to dollar stability," ooe dealer said.

The Fed is believed to have bought dollars on Mooday wbeo the currency stood at 124 yen and also last Friday, when it was slightly above 125 yen. The US Central Bank on hoth days worked in concert with the Bank of Japan.

The dollar moved sharply higher yesterday, snapping out of its decline largely because of Fed and Bank of Japan intervention, dealers said. It closed at 125.15 yen and 1.6685 West German marks, up from 123.75 yeo and 1.6555 marks on Monday. Drastic

Although the dollar's slide over the last few days has oot been drastic, dealers said it was crucial that the central banks stanisch its decline now, for several reasons.

For one thing, the weak dollar has unsettled US stocks, reviving fears about a repeat of the October stock market crash. The Dow Jones Industrial Average lost 108 points last week, its biggest weekly loss so far this year.

also has riled the US hond market, sending the yield on the 30-year issue to 8.84 per cent at Monday's close, its highest level since January.

Meanwhile, the stock prices closed bigber yesterday io moderate trading as hargain hunting and a firmer dollar combined to halt a three-day pull-

Average rose 18.57 to close at 1998.34. The iodex jumped about 18 points in the first 15 minutes of trading and moved back above the 2000 level for a short time before retreating in the final hour.

Advances led declines 1,018-467 among the 1,968 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Volume totaled 152,690,000 shares, compared with 142,820,000 traded on Mooday. "After you come down for three days, you get into an over-sold cooditioo," said Larry Wachtel, an analyst with-Prudential-Bache Securities Inc., "This was a bargain-hunting bounce, or a technical bounce. I wouldn't get all excited."

Wachtel said the market received support from the ground in the dollar, which rose to 124.90 yen in New York trading, up from 123.80 on Monday.

The final hour of trading took away from the market's perfor-mance because it involved a selloff io some of the key hightech stocks, such as IBM and Digital Equipment, Wachtel

"The late selloff takes some of the shine away from the advance," Wachtel said. "It was a respectable recovery, but the tone of the market at the bell left something to be desired."

Broad-market indexes gained. The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 1.11 to 147.22. Standard & Poor's 500stock index rose 2.01 to 260.07. The price of ao average share added 24 cents.

Assumption

"The working assumption is that this is a technical rally off a very bad week last week," said Ralph Bloch, senior vicepresident of Raymond, James & Associates in St Petershurg, Fla., referring to the sharp pullhack that saw the Dow give hack nearly 109 points and fall below the 2000 level.

Bloch believes the advance is technical in nature "because it is. very unusual for a market to turn oo the dime and take off again.' "If it proceeds to go a little higher, then it tests the lows established on Monday, then we might be ready to rally," Bloch

"The market is fiodiog some support at 1980, but it is a difficult period here. The hurden of proof is back on the Bulls. We had a real crack in the uptrend line last week."

Before the market opened, the Commerce Department said the government's main gauge of future economic activity — the iodex of leading economic indicators — rose 0.9 per cent io Fehruary:

The increase followed a revised 1.1 per cent decline in January and a revised 0.4 per cent increase io December. The February data was in line with Wall Street expectations.

KD deposit rates display softer tone

KUWAITI dinar interbank deposits displayed a softer tone in a calm market, with traders relieved over a Central Bank move late oo Tuesday to renew all its separate moothly loan settlements with Kuwaiti banks.

During the past two days rates have edged up following a warning hy the bank it might be unable this month to meet all its agreed financial support for the banks' problem loans. "The market bas calmed

Ecuador suggests 5pc cut in Opec oil output

QUITO, March 30, (Reuter): Ecuador's Energy Minister Fer-nando Santos Alvite said yesterday that Opec should agree on a five per cent total output cut to boost tumbling ioternational oil

"This decision, which would bave a healtby effect oo the market, should be taken by Opec as long as other producers not belonging to the organisation adopt a similar conduct," Santos Alvite said in an interview with Reuters.

Go up

He said that if both Opec and non-Opec members agree to cut production by about five per cent, prices could go up to the official $18 a barrel level.

Santos Alvite said all 13 members of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries were producing about 17 million harrels per day (hpd). The group's quota is 15.06 million hpd, excluding Iraq, which did oot sign the last Opec accord. "A five per cent reduction io the secood quarter would amount to about 850,000 barrels per day," Santos Alvite said. "If you add up the cuts hy non-Opec members, we would reach the effect we are seeking oo the market.

At least two Opec ministers plan to try to persuade non-Opec producers to cooperate in an effort to boost prices, he said. Santos Afvite also said that an Opec price committee meeting, set for April 9 in Vienna, may oot be enough to halt sliding world oil prices. "The price committee should call an extraordioary ministerial conference to make adjustments to the organisation's crude output," he said.

The Opec price committee is made up of oil ministers from Nigeria, Indonesia, Saudi Arabia, Algeria and Venezuela.

The 1988-89 World Cup is aimed at popularising chess, making it more adaptable to the needs of the media, while at the same time providing a stronger financial base for the top players.

DETERMINED BRITON ENDS MEXICAN'S BRIEF REIGN

Honeyghan KO's Vaca to regain WBC title

30, (AP): Lloyd Honeyghan had promised for weeks that his welterweight boxing title was only on loan to Jorge Vaca. He didn't need long to prove this point.

"I'm hack in my rightful lace," the 27-year-old Briton said after demolishing Vaca in three rounds last night to win back the World Boxing Council (WBC) crown 'I'm going to keep the time for a long time.

Honeyghan, detbroned by Vaca five months ago in the only blemish of his 32-fight career, became only the second Briton to regain a world title at any weight when be knocked out the Mexican at the Wemhley Arena.

Pinning Vaca to the ropes in the middle of the third round, Honeyghan unleashed a torrent of hlows, finally putting his man down with a crunching right to the body after more than a minute of constant punishment.

"I was switching to the head and body. He didn't know where I was going to hit him" Honeyghan said.

Yesterday the QCA said Botham had not complied with certain provisions of his contract, forcing the association to end the agreement. Former Australian and Queensland Test fast bowler
